Rafael Nadal, Djokovic need to see bigger picture over Saudi exhibition match

By Kevin Mitchell

O f the many withdrawing from the Paris Masters, the biggest was probably Roger Federer. The Swiss star was out of action since injuring his knee in the round of 16 at the US Open. Nadal, on the other hand, has been in top form recently, winning his last three matches. Djokovic has also been in great shape, but his recent performances have been marred by injuries, particularly to his elbow.

After the Paris Masters, the French Open will be the next big event in tennis. Nadal, Federer, and Djokovic will all be hoping to win the title, but there are many other talented players who could put up a good fight. The French Open is known for its challenging clay courts, which can make it difficult for players to win.

As of now, Nadir, I’m sure I’m going to have a 1.5 months break, and I’ll try to think about my life and about my career. I’ll take some time to think about the future of my career and what I want to do next. I’ll talk to my team and see what they think. I think I’ll take a break for a while to focus on my health and my family. I’ll see what happens next year and make a decision then.

Jones forced to face England rebuilding job

By Sports Reporter

Warren Gatland's team will have to rebuild after losing both the start of the new season to injury and the halfway point of the season to a late withdrawal. The team's performance against Argentina was below expectations, with some players not performing at their usual level.

Jones is facing a difficult period, both on and off the field. He has been forced to make changes to the squad, including replacements for several key players. The team's performance against England in the Six Nations was poor, with many errors and missed opportunities. The team's form continues to be a concern, and Jones is under pressure to improve the team's performance in the upcoming matches.

New Kuwait Motor Town circuit ready for MERC return

By A correspondent

Kuwait's National Rallying Centre, the newly built circuit, is set to welcome the MERC (Middle East Rally Championship) for its second round this weekend. The circuit, located in the north of Kuwait, is expected to host some of the best rally drivers in the region.

The event will feature a mix of both national and international drivers, with many of the top rally teams expected to compete. The circuit's challenging layout and high standards of organisation are expected to provide an exciting spectacle for the fans.

The event is set to start tomorrow and will run until Sunday. The main races will be held on Saturday, with the finale taking place on Sunday. The event is expected to attract a large crowd of spectators, and the atmosphere is expected to be electric.

This event marks the return of the MERC to Kuwait, where the first round was held last year. The event is expected to provide a strong test for the drivers and their cars, and the spectators are in for a treat.

The event is being hosted by the Kuwait Motor Sport Club, which has a long history of hosting international motorsport events. The club has a diverse range of facilities, including a 32 pit facilities and parking for 2,000 vehicles, making it a perfect venue for such a high-profile event.

Lopetegui gambled everything and lost the lot after being sacked

‘Managing the dressing room is more important than the knowledge of a coach’

J ulen Lopetegui’s flop at Madrid proved the hard act to follow given his three consecutive Champion League triumphs, not to mention the Spaniard’s popularity in the dressing room. But beneath the celebrations in blue, critics were already appearing to stir up trouble for Lopetegui and his team.

Lopetegui depart ed out of the Champions League semi-finals after seven matches, at home in La Liga and earlier this month, but in the space of four months the team had won five – the key match was a 3-0 win over Roma in the round of 16, which followed a 5-1 drubbing by Barcelona, who returned to Camp Nou, however. They have turned around their dismal start to the season and scored a crucial 1-0 win against Celta Vigo, who are now the second-best team in La Liga.

But he says the trip to the tiny Spanish exclave is a humiliation. ‘‘Madrid are ninth in La Liga after 139 days after the club sacked Lopetegui. 2018 is a year of losses in La Liga, with Madrid losing eight games in all competitions and Madrid were already short on frontmen in the previous round of 16, so they needed a new coach. The next coach will be tasked with restoring Madrid to its place in La Liga.”
