The campaign is targeting students aged 7 to 9 years old from Qatar’s government schools. It is designed to educate students about the symptoms and consequences of diabetes, as well as the importance of healthy eating and regular physical activity. Teachers will also be trained to recognize diabetes symptoms and the importance of early detection.

The campaign will be held annually for Math and Science Development Programme (NCED) and the support of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education. "We look forward to continuing our collaboration with ExxonMobil Qatar and other organizations to raise awareness and promote healthier lifestyles among young people. Lawmakers tell Norway government to be ready to recognize Palestinian state

Norway’s parliament has adopted a resolution calling on the nation to be ready to recognize a Palestinian state in the future but is a sign of the concern over the Gaza war in national assemblies across Europe.

The resolution was supported by all but the Social Democrats, who abstained. However, it is not binding on the Norwegian government, which has already recognized the Palestinian authority, which was established in 1993.

The resolution came in response to a call from international organizations, including the United Nations, to recognize a Palestinian state, which was established in 1988.

In addition, the resolution called on Norway to support the Palestinian Authority in its efforts to gain international recognition for a Palestinian state.

The resolution was adopted by the Norwegian Storting, the country’s parliament.

The resolution was also supported by the Christian Democratic Party, the Norwegian Labour Party, the Centre Party, and the Socialist People’s Party.

The resolution is expected to be debated in national assemblies across Europe, including the European Parliament and the European Commission.

The resolution is also expected to be adopted by the Norwegian government, which has already recognized the Palestinian Authority, which was established in 1993.

Biden and Xi restore ties, gloss over US pressure-offshoot rift

Biden enters China for talks with Xi as US pressure drops

US President Joe Biden and Chinese President Xi Jinping met on Thursday, saying they will still consider each other "friends". The two leaders held a summit in the context of the United States pressing Beijing to roll back its non-market policies. The two sides also agreed to hold talks later this year with the US president visiting Beijing. The two leaders also met under the pressure of China's economic slowdown and rising tensions with the West. Biden and Xi discussed a range of topics, including climate change and Taiwan. Taylor says that Taylor has been working closely with China to try to improve relations, but that there is still a long way to go in terms of restoring full diplomatic ties. The meeting comes a day after the US announced that it would be restoring full diplomatic relations with Taiwan, a move that was seen as a significant step forward in improving relations with the island. The two leaders discussed a range of topics, including climate change and Taiwan. Biden said that the US will continue to support self-determination for Taiwan, while Xi said that China will continue to pursue a peaceful reunification with Taiwan. The two leaders also discussed the need for a peaceful resolution of the Taiwan issue, with Xi saying that Taiwan is an integral part of China. The meeting comes as the United States and China continue to navigate a complex relationship characterized by competition, cooperation, and friction. A case for energy realism at COP28

By Ana Palacios

At this year’s coming United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP28) in Dubai, world leaders will for the first time be taking stock of the world’s progress against the global climate agreement to 2025. The growing frequency of extreme-weather events in recent years has made it increasingly clear how much of the global warming is already occurring and what it means for the future. In fact, this pattern has become embedded in policymakers’ strategies to formulate the Paris Agreement. "We can no longer afford to delay action," said the International Energy Agency’s executive director, Fatih Birol, at a UN climate conference in 2020. "We need to accelerate the transition to a net-zero future to avoid the worst impacts of climate change." This is crucial to protect the world’s most vulnerable populations, including the billions of people currently living in poverty, from the devastating effects of climate change.

The energy trilemma, which the IEA describes as the "tug of war between energy security, affordability, and sustainability," has been a constant challenge in the energy sector. As energy demand increases, so does the pressure on governments to ensure that their energy systems are both affordable and sustainable. The energy trilemma also highlights the importance of supply and demand management, which is necessary to achieve a balance between the three dimensions of the trilemma.

The energy trilemma is a complex issue, and achieving a balance between energy security, affordability, and sustainability is not easy. However, governments must take action now to address the challenges of the energy trilemma and meet the goals of the Paris Agreement. As the world continues to grapple with the impacts of climate change, it is imperative that we take a case for energy realism at COP28 and work together to achieve a sustainable future.

Argentina’s fed-up farmers lean towards outsider Milei

A qualitatively different outlook has taken hold in the Argentine agricultural sector, as a result of the government’s new approach to energy policy. The government has announced plans to increase the use of renewable energy sources, which is a step in the right direction. However, the agricultural sector is concerned about the potential impact of these plans on their livelihoods.

The agricultural sector is a key driver of Argentina’s economy, and it is poised to play a significant role in the country’s transition to a more sustainable future. As the government works to implement its renewable energy plans, it is critical that the agricultural sector is involved in the decision-making process. This will help ensure that the plans are beneficial to all stakeholders, and that the agricultural sector can continue to thrive.

The agricultural sector is concerned about the potential impact of the government’s renewable energy plans on their livelihoods. The government must work with the agricultural sector to ensure that the plans are beneficial to all stakeholders, and that the agricultural sector can continue to thrive. If the government fails to adequately involve the agricultural sector in the decision-making process, it could lead to negative consequences for the country’s economy and its people.

The meaning of the dual testament of faith

Praise be to Allah, Lord of the Worlds, the Compassionate, the Merciful, upon Prophet Muhammad (sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam) and all of the Companions.

Almighty Allah said the following word(s): ‘Abdullah ibn Umar (r.a.) narrated that Allah’s Messenger (sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam) said to him, ‘If you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky. And if you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky. And if you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky. And if you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky. And if you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky. And if you narrate the Hadith of the earth and the sky, you will be among the people of the earth and the sky.

Almighty Allah said, ‘I say, “There is no God but Allah.”’ He (sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam) said, ‘Therefore, it is incumbent upon every Muslim to believe that there is no God but Allah. And to believe that Allah is the only true divinity to Allah alone. That is, the slave should believe that Allah is the only true divinity, and Allah alone has the right to His name and attributes.

The meaning of the dual testament of faith

The first half of the Hadil Declaration confirming the testament of faith includes on earth, after they have been paid their share in this world. Thereupon Allah revealed the following words to the Prophet (sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam): ‘If a believer truly knew that Allah is One and Alone and is the true Lord, according to the sunnah and the consensus of the Muslim scholars, then he would not be taken to task for it. This is because the hadith clarifies that Allah is One and Alone and is the true Lord. Therefore, there is no God but Allah. And to believe that Allah is the only true divinity to Allah alone. That is, the slave should believe that Allah is the only true divinity, and Allah alone has the right to His name and attributes.

Conditions of the First Half of the Declaration

Continuing the testament of faith must include fulfilling the seven conditions. Each one of them is an unbreakable condition. These seven conditions must be accompanied by the words of devotion. Anyone who thinks he understands the conditions of fulfilling the testament of faith and he says, ‘I believe in Allah and His Messenger.’ Allah knows that he believes in Allah and His Messenger. So he is included among those who have committed the dhikr al-wudu (lit. the action of repeated dhikr). And the dhikr al-wudu includes those who know it was unlawful as an action to commit it.

The Testimony of Allah

In the testimony of faith, he declares his belief by saying, ‘I bear witness that there is no God but Allah, and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.’

The second half of the declaration of faith

The second half of the declaration of faith includes the following words: ‘I bear witness that there is no God but Allah, and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.’

2. Certainty which negates Doubt. Only those who have true belief will feel that what they believe is true and certain. This is because belief is not based on imagination or on emotions, but on the intellect. Hence, belief is a concept or a mental construct that requires a certain level of intellectual understanding.

3. Sincerity and purity of intent which should be made with the fullest conviction. For example, when a Muslim is making a dhikr (lit. remembrance), he should make sure that he is not doing it for the sake of show or to gain something in return. Rather, he should make sure that he is giving it all to Allah with sincerity and purity of intent.

4. Truthfulness which negates hypocrisy. When a Muslim is saying, ‘I believe in Allah,’ he should not be hypocrisy. This means that he should not claim to believe in Allah while in reality he is not doing it. For example, if a Muslim is not being truthful in his words or his actions, then he is hypocritical.

5. Love which negates hatred. When a Muslim is saying, ‘I believe in Allah,’ he should not hate anyone. This means that he should not harbor any feelings of animosity or ill will towards anyone. For example, if a Muslim is not being loving in his words or his actions, then he is unloving.

6. Forgiveness which diverts them from doing what they have done. When a Muslim is saying, ‘I believe in Allah,’ he should not be proud of what he has done. This means that he should not think that he is better than others or that he is superior to them. For example, if a Muslim is not being humble in his words or his actions, then he is not humble.

7. Forbearance which means to refrain from doing what is wrong. When a Muslim is saying, ‘I believe in Allah,’ he should not do anything that is wrong. This means that he should not commit any sin or transgress against the principles of Islam. For example, if a Muslim is not being righteous in his words or his actions, then he is not righteous.

The Hadith of Al-Bukhari

Al-Bukhari narrated that the Prophet (sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam) said, ‘There are three who will enter Paradise, and there are three who will enter Hell. The three who will enter Paradise are: the one who repents from the act of disobedience and Allah accepts it, the one who prays, and the one who fasts. The three who will enter Hell are: the one who is repulsed from the act of disobedience, the one who destroys the earth, and the one who drinks alcohol.’

Summary

In summary, the Hadith of Al-Bukhari clarifies that there are three who will enter Paradise and three who will enter Hell. The three who will enter Paradise are: the one who repents from the act of disobedience and Allah accepts it, the one who prays, and the one who fasts. The three who will enter Hell are: the one who is repulsed from the act of disobedience, the one who destroys the earth, and the one who drinks alcohol.
Angola's pavilion opens

Angola's pavilion was inaugurated at Expo 2023 Doha in the presence of Angolan ambassador Antonia dos Santos Ramos, Expo 2023 Doha commissioner-general Bader al-Dafa, and a number of heads of diplomatic missions and ambassadors accredited to the state, those interested in environmental affairs, and members of the Angolan community in Qatar.

The pavilion offers visitors a glimpse into Angola's heritage and traditions. Guests took a guided tour throughout the pavilion, which highlighted Angola's national food, inviting visitors to savour the flavours that define the country's culinary identity. Angola's handicraft and artefacts were also presented. Angola's pavilion welcomed guests with souvenirs and an introduction to the country's cultures and its key crops. Ramos expressed his happiness at the opening of the country's pavilion at the expo, and praised the support from Expo 2023 Doha's organising committee. He said that Angola has always shown interest in participating in such events, as they can use the process of growing and harvesting coffee, which is the country's main crop.

Ethiopia's pavilion displays mixture of culture, heritage and traditions

Ethiopia's pavilion in the International Zone at the International Horticultural Expo 2023 Doha welcomes visitors to experience its artistic blend of authenticity, cultural heritage, and customs and traditions of its ethnic groups living in Ethiopia.

The pavilion showcases the development of its natural resources. It also provides ideas about potential investment opportunities in Ethiopia in areas that include fisheries, fisheries goods, pharmaceuticals, processing agricultural products, mining, communications, information technology and tourism, as well as new and emerging fields like transportation, railways, health, consulting, advertising services and e-commerce.

Visitors to the Ethiopian pavilion will be able to watch the traditions of coffee preparation, starting from raw coffee beans. They can see the process of growing and harvesting coffee, which is the favourite drink of Ethiopians. The pavilion also displays the most prominent products that distinguish the country, such as handicrafts using natural materials and popular traditional clothing in many colours. Certain types of flowers that Ethiopia is known for will be showcased in the pavilion.
