Israeli bombardment kills four in Lebanon

Lebanon has mourned four journalists killed in an attack on their vehicle near the border town of Jezzine, asPressed by Israel.

Hamas said those were its “first and final” response to the deaths of four journalists who were killed in an Israeli airstrike on their vehicle in southern Lebanon on Tuesday.

It was the worst single attack on the media in the 11-day war, and the first to kill foreign journalists since the conflict began.

“Israel had no right to attack journalists. This attack proves once and for all that Israel is keen to target civilian circles, especially journalists and mediators,” Hamas spokesman Fawzi Barhoum said.

The attack came as the Israeli military said it was preparing to launch a ground offensive into Lebanon, where it has seen its forces suffering casualties.

The military said it was launching a ground operation to “target the sources of the attacks” after a series of rocket launches from Lebanon into Israel.

Hamas said it was not responsible for the attack and called on the UN to start an investigation.

“Israel is again targeting innocent civilians and media professionals, violating the Geneva Convention and international law,” Hamas said in a statement.

The attack came as the Palestinian Authority announced the release of 600 Palestinian prisoners in exchange for the return of a kidnapped Israeli soldier.

The release was announced by the PA’s negotiations committee, which is responsible for the exchange.

“Israel is trying to make a deal with Hamas to release the soldier, but we will not accept it,” said the committee’s head.

The PA has been carrying out a massive humanitarian effort in the West Bank and Gaza to try to end the conflict, but Israel has so far refused to participate.

Global debt levels lead to crisis fears

A severe executive who has been battling weight gain since he was 16, John, a tech executive who has managed to lose 18kg, said he would be good for his health if he took it for weight loss. But while he could not prescribe Ozempic, it would be good for him if he took it for weight loss.

The medicine Ozempic — designed for type 2 diabetes to help manage weight — appeared to cause weight loss, the British government declared in a Patient Safety Alert issued in September. The government’s July order, including with guidance, was to stop patients from taking it for weight loss, while diabetes patients could continue taking it.

But the dough products and patient groups and pharmaceuticals and pharmacies had joined forces to fight against the drug for weight loss, while diabetes patients had joined forces to fight against the drug for weight loss.
