PM calls for efforts to limit spread of Israel-Gaza war
Shinichi Mohamed holds talks with Blinken

During the meeting, the Needsm structure was focused on the ongoing conflict between the State of Israel and the Government of the Gaza Strip, discussing the latest developments and the need to find a peaceful resolution to the crisis. The meeting also addressed the importance of international pressure to support the Palestinian Authority and to ensure that humanitarian aid is delivered to the people of Gaza. Following the talks, the two leaders exchanged views on the situation in the region and agreed to work closely to find a lasting solution to the conflict.

Amir stresses immediate ceasefire, aid delivery to Gaza in Blinken meeting

Amir had previously discussed the situation with Blinken in a phone call, and during their meeting, Amir stressed the importance of a ceasefire and called for immediate aid delivery to Gaza. Amir highlighted the severity of the situation in Gaza and the need for urgent action to alleviate the humanitarian crisis. He also commended Blinken for his efforts in finding a peaceful solution to the conflict.

Two journalists including son of AJ Gaza bureau chief killed

Two journalists, including the son of a prominent journalist in Gaza, were killed in an Israeli airstrike in the Gaza Strip.HDR Haitham Abu Ismail, a Palestinian journalist, was killed along with two other journalists in the attack. The Israeli military claimed that they were targeting military sites, but the journalist's families and colleagues have called for an investigation into the incident.

Six sailors in 'biggest challenge'

A group of six soldiers were plucked from the coast of the Gaza Strip by the Israeli navy during the ongoing conflict. The soldiers were part of a naval team involved in a search and rescue mission in the area. The operation was carried out in response to a reported threat to the lives of the sailors. The Israeli military has been under criticism for its treatment of Palestinian civilians and the use of force in the ongoing conflict.

Al Emadi Hospital launches integrated program for obesity management and treatment

Dr. Mohammed Al Emadi, Senior Consultant in Bariatric Surgery and Chairman of the Board of Directors of Al-Emadi Medical Group, emphasized that the comprehensive approach to obesity management is essential in today’s world, where obesity is a severe health problem that demands immediate attention. He explained that obesity is a complex medical condition that requires effective control, not limited to surgical procedures such as balloon installations, but also includes lifestyle changes, exercise, and nutritional support. Dr. Al-Adimi, a consultant in obesity surgery, stated that the hospital’s track record in successful obesity surgeries is a testament to the efficacy of their approach. He highlighted the hospital’s commitment to employing advanced staplers and other technologies operated by skilled and specialized teams. Dr. Al-Emadi clarified that the hospital’s services are part of a comprehensive program methodically crafted to assist individuals in their weight loss journey and facilitate the adoption of a healthier lifestyle.

Dr. Al-Emadi explained that the initiative aims to encourage community members to embrace a healthier lifestyle, adhering to prescribed plans crafted to meet the unique needs of each individual. He highlighted that the program’s success is evidenced by the hospital’s record of advanced staplers in gastric cut operations, effectively preventing leakage and complications. He stressed that in addition to surgical procedures, the hospital offers a range of supportive services, including nutritional consultations, physical therapy, and psychiatric support, to ensure holistic health outcomes.

Furthermore, the hospital has planned and continues to provide a range of initiatives aimed at enhancing community well-being. These include seminars, nutritional consultations, and exercise programs tailored to support weight loss and maintenance. The hospital also offers specialized services such as gastric balloon installations. This support is designed to empower specialists affiliated with the hospital to address obesity through procedures such as stomach reduction, bypass surgeries, and other advanced techniques. These efforts, coupled with the hospital’s expertise in bariatric surgery, solidify its position as a leader in the private sector within this specialized field.

Dr. Al-Emadi stressed that adopting a healthy lifestyle and overcoming obstacles in achieving sustainable weight loss requires continuous effort and attention. This includes overall health prevention, improved quality of sleep, stress management, and self-confidence, improved energy levels, improved mental health, and a positive outlook on life. He emphasized the importance of holistic health and the role of the hospital in facilitating and supporting individuals on their weight loss journey.

For his part, Dr. Abdulelah Al-Adimi, Medical Director of Al-Emadi Hospital, Consultant of Nephrology and Urology, and member of the American Society of Urology and Nephrology, confirmed that the integrated program announced by Al-Emadi Hospital is helping those seeking to lead a healthier lifestyle. He explained that the hospital’s commitment to obesity management is a direct response to the pressing and substantial rise in obesity rates within the community. This initiative is driven by the crucial need to bolster awareness campaigns, support preventive measures, and expand access to advanced services.

He added that the private medical sector facilities are considered the largest assistant to the government sector in providing medical care to patients, and from this point of view comes the hospital’s campaign to discriminate obesity. Keep your weight at a healthy weight is an essential measure that demands the participation of all. He explained that obesity is a severe health problem that demands immediate attention. He highlighted the hospital’s commitment to employing advanced staplers and other technologies operated by skilled and specialized teams. Dr. Al-Emadi clarified that the hospital’s services are part of a comprehensive program methodically crafted to assist individuals in their weight loss journey and facilitate the adoption of a healthier lifestyle.

Dr. Al-Adimi added that the campaign also includes obesity surgeries during the period from November 1st to February. This campaign involves a series of health talks by medical doctors, such as diabetes, obesity, and endocrinologist, as well as the availability of weight loss medications and supplements. The hospital offers a range of supportive services, including nutritional consultations, physical therapy, and psychiatric support, to ensure holistic health outcomes.

Additionally, the campaign offers a free consultation in the endocrinology and diabetes clinic, along with a complimentary consultation in the nutrition clinic. Furthermore, individuals can avail themselves of the body composition analysis device during the period from January 6 to April 6. Dr. Al-Adimi stressed that the hospital’s commitment to obesity management is a direct response to the pressing and substantial rise in obesity rates within the community. This initiative is driven by the crucial need to bolster awareness campaigns, support preventive measures, and expand access to advanced services.

America's bid for first Moon landing since Apollo

The first American spacecraft is set to land on the Moon on Monday, more than a half-century after the last Apollo mission. The mission, called Artemis I, aims to send a crew to the Moon by 2024, as NASA's Artemis program progresses. The spacecraft, known as the Space Launch System (SLS), will carry four astronauts on a mission that will include lunar orbit and a return to Earth. The mission is part of a larger effort to establish a permanent human presence on the Moon and eventually Mars. The Artemis mission is a major milestone in the 50th anniversary of Apollo 11, the first manned mission to land on the Moon.

Senior Vatican officials made case for married priesthood

The Vatican has made a strong case for allowing married men to enter the priesthood, according to reports. The move is part of a larger effort by the Catholic Church to modernize and better meet the needs of its flock. The idea has been controversial, with some opposing the idea on the grounds that it would undermine the traditional structure of the Church. However, the Vatican has been pushing for a more inclusive approach, and the move is seen as a significant step forward.

Few Boeing jets to remain grounded; probe for part that blew off plane

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has lifted the grounding of most Boeing 777s, following a safety review after a part of the engine failed during a flight over Denver. The FAA has been working with Boeing to investigate the cause of the engine failure, which occurred during a United Airlines flight. The investigation has focused on a part of the engine called a fan blade, which is known for failing periodically. The FAA has said that the investigation is ongoing and that additional parts may need to be removed from service.

Bangladesh PM wins re-election

The ruling Awami League has won a seventh consecutive term in office, defeating the opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party, the prime minister announced on Friday morning, with the election commission confirming the result.

The prime minister has secured a record third term, the first to win three consecutive terms, and is the longest-serving prime minister in Bangladesh.

The result was announced shortly after voting closed at 4pm, with the election commission confirming the result.

The prime minister has said that his party has won a “decisive victory” in the election, which was held on Thursday.

The election commission had earlier announced the result, saying that the Awami League had won 288 of the 300 seats in Parliament.

The Bangladesh national anthem was played in the capital, Dhaka, as the result was announced.

The Awami League has been in power since 2009, when it won the last general election.

The party has been in power since 2009 and has a majority of about 200 seats in Parliament.

The opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party, which has been led by Khaleda Zia, has a virtually non-existent presence in Parliament.

UK announces Europe's first high-tech uranium fuel plant

The European Union has granted a €90 million ($109 million) funding to help finance the construction of Europe's first high-tech uranium fuel plant. The funding will be used to support the development of advanced fuel technologies that could help the continent to move away from its reliance on Russian uranium supplies.

The new fuel plant, which is being built by British company INL, will produce advanced fuel elements that are designed to be more efficient and less expensive than traditional uranium fuel. The plant is expected to come online in 2025, and it will be the first of its kind in Europe.

The funding is part of a larger EU initiative to diversify the continent's energy supplies and reduce its dependence on Russian imports. The EU has been seeking to reduce its reliance on Russian energy since the start of the conflict in Ukraine.

INL, which is a long-time supplier of nuclear fuel to the EU, said the funding will help it to continue its development of advanced fuel technologies. The company said it is committed to working with the EU to create a more secure and sustainable energy future.

The funding was announced on Tuesday by the EU Commission, which said it was part of a wider effort to support the development of advanced nuclear technologies in Europe. The commission said the new fuel plant would be an important step in the continent's transition to a more sustainable energy future.

UK Energy Secretary Alok Sharma said the funding was a significant boost for the UK's nuclear industry. "This funding will help INL to continue its development of advanced fuel technologies, and it will help to ensure that the UK remains a world leader in the development of these technologies," he said.

The new fuel plant will be built on the coast of England, near the town of Lowestoft. It is expected to have a capacity of around 1,000 metric tons of uranium per year. The plant will be able to produce fuel elements for a range of reactor types, including light water reactors and advanced gas-cooled reactors.

The funding was provided through the European Commission's Horizon Europe program, which aims to support the development of new technologies and innovations in a range of sectors, including energy.

INL said it was excited about the funding and said it would work closely with the EU to ensure that the new fuel plant is successful. "We look forward to working with the EU to develop this new fuel plant and to ensure that it is a success," said INL's chief executive, Jochen Schrom.

The new fuel plant is part of a larger EU initiative to diversify the continent's energy supplies and reduce its dependence on Russian imports. The EU has been seeking to reduce its reliance on Russian energy since the start of the conflict in Ukraine.
Russia hopes to drain Ukraine with mass strikes

By Naria Bakhshiev in Moscow

The Kremlin is planning a series of large-scale military exercises in eastern and southern Ukraine over the coming months, according to sources familiar with the planning.

The exercises, which are expected to involve tens of thousands of troops, will be designed to test the Russian military's ability to quickly deploy forces to the region in the event of a crisis.

The exercises will also include simulated attacks on Ukraine's infrastructure, including power grids and gas pipelines, and will test the effectiveness of the Ukrainian military's response.

The Kremlin has repeatedly warned that it will use military force to defend its interests in eastern Ukraine, where pro-Russian separatists have been fighting against the government since 2014.

Qatar: Debate event in Oman underscores tourism’s role in cementing Gulf identity

The role of tourism in helping people from across the region learn and foster cultural exchanges between the GCC and the world was the focus of a recent event held in Oman. The event, organized by the Department of Tourism and Antiquities of Oman, was held under the patronage of His excellency Sayed Fahad bin Mahmoud Al-Hasani, the Minister of Tourism and Culture. The event underlined the importance of tourism in contributing to the shared Gulf identity, which is a vital component of the region’s cultural and economic strategy.

The debate, which was moderated by Dr. Sultan Al-Mulhim, underlined the need for increased cooperation between the GCC countries to foster cultural exchange and understanding. The debate featured panelists from various sectors, including tourism, academia, and cultural heritage, who shared their insights on the role of tourism in fostering a shared Gulf identity. The panelists highlighted the importance of cultural exchange in promoting mutual understanding and respect among the Gulf countries.

The event also featured a cultural showcase, which included traditional dances, music, and cuisine from the GCC countries. The event was attended by a large number of participants from the region, who were impressed by the quality of the presentations and the level of engagement.

The debate underscored the importance of tourism in cementing a shared Gulf identity and promoting cultural exchange between the GCC countries. The panelists stressed the need for continued efforts to foster cultural exchange and understanding among the Gulf countries. The event was an important step towards achieving this goal and building a shared Gulf identity.
