Bangladesh’s Hasina celebrates ‘absolute victory’ after polls without opposition

Hasina celebrates absolute victory:

AFP

Bangladesh’s Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina confidently declared Sunday that her ruling Awami League had won “absolute victory” in the polls, celebrating her fourth consecutive term in power after the ruling party’s landslide victory.

Hasina has presided over a period of relative stability and economic growth, despite international criticism of the country’s general elections in January 2024, which were marred by allegations of fraud and vote-buying.

Sheikh Hasina’s party, the Awami League, claimed victory in the polls with a large margin, winning a record number of seats in parliament. She took to social media to express her joy, thanking the voting public for their support.

“This victory is a result of the people’s mandate and their support,” she said.

The elections were held amid tight security, with thousands of security personnel deployed across the country to prevent any incidents. The election commission declared the polls “free and fair,” despite international concerns over electoral irregularities.

Hasina’s victory means she will remain in power for another five years, reinforcing her position as one of the most influential leaders in Bangladesh. She is expected to continue her policies of economic development and social welfare programs.

The election results were announced on Sunday, with the Awami League declaring its victory. The ruling party won 230 out of 300 seats in parliament, far exceeding the required majority of 148 seats. The opposition BNP secured just 69 seats, while the rest of the seats went to smaller parties.

Hasina’s official campaign was praised for its innovation and inclusivity, reaching out to voters across the country through digital platforms. The ruling party also placed a strong emphasis on its achievements over the past five years, including economic growth, poverty reduction, and social welfare programs.

The victory comes amidst a period of economic challenges, with Bangladesh facing high inflation and a slowdown in growth. However, Hasina’s administration has been praised for its efforts to diversify the economy and attract foreign investment.

The election results have implications for regional and international relations. Bangladesh’s strong stance on the issue of the Cox’s Bazar refugee camp, which houses over 1 million Rohingya refugees, is expected to continue under Hasina’s leadership.

The victory also comes at a time of growing political tension in the region, with the ongoing situation in the Indian Ocean, including the Maldives and Sri Lanka, likely to be a key agenda item for Hasina’s government.

The ruling Awami League has been in power since 2009, under the leadership of Sheikh Hasina, who has become one of the most influential leaders in Bangladesh. The government is known for its policies of economic development and social welfare programs.

Appalling ‘false’ convictions for UK Post Office ‘theft’ spur outrage

AP

The British government said Friday it would launch a full investigation into the Post Office’s handling of apparently wrongful convictions for theft and fraud following an extended period of public outrage. Investigations into the cases of a number of people, mostly women, who spent years in prison for theft and fraud after being convicted of stealing from their workplace, were launched by the government following a public outcry.

Prime Minister Theresa May ordered an independent inquiry into the mail delivery firm’s handling of queries and cases of alleged Post Office theft and fraud, following a campaign by former employees and public figures.

The government said in a statement that the inquiry will be led by a former judge and will look at issues such as the way in which the Post Office processed and handled complaints, and the procedures it followed.

The statement added that the inquiry will be independent and will not be subject to the control of the Post Office or any other body.

Another romp for Hasina the democracy icon-turned-iron lady

Hasina first served terms in prison under her father’s Awami League party, beginning a decade-long struggle to restore democracy that saw her subjected to lengthy stretches of house arrest. She returned after living in exile for six years to take the reins of her father’s Awami League party (BNP) to help oust military dictator Hussain Mohamed Ershad from power. The 78-year-old Zia meanwhile faced years of political isolation ever since.

Hasina has been praised by supporters for leading Bangladesh’s government since 2009. Bangladesh, a nation of 165 million people in the mostly Muslim region, has grown 6% each year ever since.

FRENCH Prime Minister Elisabeth Borne presented the outline of France’s European Union elections strategy on Monday, saying Macron prepared to send a long-awaited electoral notice in a bid to give new momentum to the French in the three years of the presidency.

She said she had received the electoral notice from the European Union’s leadership yesterday, which confirmed that French President Emmanuel Macron, the European Union president for the three years, had decided to send the notice.

“Today, Emmanuel Macron, the French president, has decided to send the electoral notice,” she said.

There had been speculation the French president might not send the notice, but Borne said Macron was “fully committed” to sending it.

“Let us do it well,” she said.

The notice is expected to be sent by the end of the year, with the French president setting general policies and the European Union’s leadership handing over responsibility for elections.

The French president has the right to stop the process and delay elections by a year if he decides to go for a second term before the end of his five-year term.

But Macron is expected to set the date for the election in the next few weeks, though he has not yet formally announced his plan.

The French president announced his intention to run for a second term in May, saying he was “fully committed” to running for a second term.

If Macron decides to run for a second term, he would set the date for the election in the next few weeks, though he has not yet formally announced his plan.

Ashghal completes 50% of Ain Khalid streets development

The Public Works Authority (Ashghal) has announced the completion of 50% of the total works in Waab Lebareg and Rawdat Al Thekhriya Streets in Ain Khalid, as part of Phase I of Doha City Road Upgrade Development Works Project, aimed at regulating traffic on main streets, improving roads, and increasing their capacity to accommodate vehicles.

The project also aims to provide new parking spaces, enhance roads made up of a length of 1km, and expand them to improve the traffic by constructing two intersections with traffic lights, on Al-Sabah statement said yesterday.

The project will provide pedestrian and cycling paths, implement landscaping and interchanges with traffic lights, an Ashghal engineer said.

The project will also implement a campaign to reduce carbon emissions from the overall works, with the project team making sure to identify high carbon emission construction activities, changing the conventional ways of conducting them to include sustainable practices in the implementation stage.

Engineer Mouza al-Sowaidi, head of Doha City Section in Ashghal’s Road Projects Department, said Waab Lebareg and Rawdat Al Thekhriya Streets are among the first streets in the Ain Khalid area, and that their development serves many residential units along with services and educational facilities, notably Umm Al Seini Park, Umm Al Seini Health Centre, Qatar Academy for Sciences and Technology, along with new shops and the shopping mall.

“Ashghal spent no effort to support sustainability practices and green initiatives by engaging all stakeholders and professionals from contractors, consultants, and suppliers along with the project’s work team to change the ways of practicing the project site in Ain Khalid have been redirected by approximately 323 tonnes, to date. These practices have also recorded other benefits that have a positive impact on the environment, safety measures, and cost reduction,” Engineer Mouza added.

Work is currently underway to complete works of both streets’ second direction, including constructing two new traffic lights, implementing cycling paths and bicycle lanes, and applying landscape and gardening works.

Sustainability wise, particularly the effort to reduce carbon emissions, the project’s main team changed its approach during the planning stage to develop sustainable ways to reduce the carbon emissions in the project site in Ain Khalid. The project also implements a campaign to reduce carbon emissions from the overall works, with the project team making sure to identify high carbon emission construction activities, changing the conventional ways of conducting them to include sustainable practices in the implementation stage.
